Over The Last Week
As of May 28, 2021

Quick Take

-  The intermediate model worsened over the past week. Part of the decline can be attributed to increased optimism in market newsletters and more bullish options market activity, both of which we view from a contrarian point of view.
-  The long-term model improved slightly, but still remains in a relatively neutral position. Valuations remain high and interest rate expectations are climbing, both of which are detracting from the model score. On a positive note, credit risk remains low and long-term trends remain positive.
-  The short-term model remains largely positive. We're observing improvement in the short-term factor that turned negative last week but are also seeing signs that current trends may be overextended in the near term.

Overall Model Output

A Closer Look at Our Tactical Positioning Targets

Each day, Meeder analyzes and ranks over 70 different factors from our short, intermediate, and long-term models. The dynamic statistical model incorporates factors covering macroeconomic, fundamental, trends and technical analysis to estimate the potential reward and marketplace risk of the equity markets. The Meeder Spectrum, Muirfield, Balanced, Moderate Allocation, and Conservative Allocation funds utilize this strategy for the Defensive Equity portion of their portfolios. The Defensive Equity Strategy guides the allocation of each fund's equity sleeve and the actual proportion of equity investments in any fund will vary depending on the investment objectives of the fund.

Understanding the Defensive Equity Snapshot

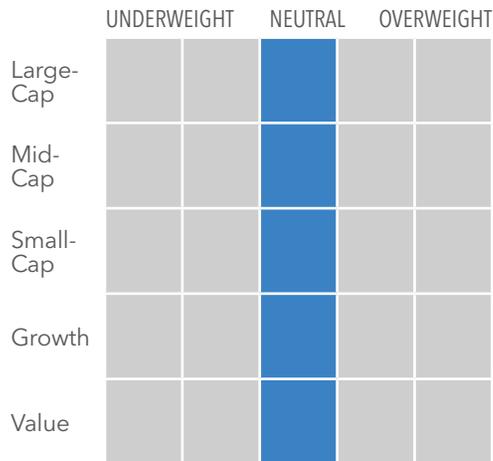

The vertical axis of the grid combines the scores of our long-, intermediate-, and short-term models to arrive at the reward value for the stock market. The horizontal axis represents the model's internal measure of stock market risk. The reward value is divided by marketplace risk to arrive at our recommended percentage of Net Equity Exposure.
